A BRIEF HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts

BY THE
MILITARY MUSEUM AND LIBRARY COMMITTEE

In the year 1537 King Henry the VIII. granted a charter to the Honourable Artillery Company of London; a century later some members of that Company, who had settled in Boston and vicinity, wishing to organize a military company here, similar to the one in England, presented a petition to Governor Winthrop asking for a charter. The request was at first denied, the Council considering it "dangerous to erect a standing authority of military men," but, finally, the Council's jealousy having been removed by the chief officers of the Colony, a charter was granted March 13, 1638, to Robert Keayne, Nathaniell Duncan, Robert Sedgwick, Willis Spencer, gentlemen, and such others as are already joined with them and such as they shall from time to time take into their Company shall be called "the Military Company of the Massachusetts." The Company was organized on the first Monday in June, 1638, by the election of Robert Keayne, Captain, Daniel Howe, Lieutenant, and Joseph Weld, Ensign. The name given the Company by its charter is "The Military Company of the Massachusetts"; this has been changed, not by any action of the Company, but by reason of its age and honor. Captain Keayne called it the "Artillery Company" and the "Great Artillery." The Legislature of Massachusetts, in its grants of land to the Company, calls it the "Artillery Company," and this name appears in the early records of the Company. The title page of the earliest printed sermon, delivered in June, 1672, states that it was preached on the day of the "Artillery Election." From 1672 to 1708 the sermons are said to be delivered before the "Artillery Company." The sermon of 1708 and all to 1738 were delivered before the "Honorable Artillery Company." The sermon of 1738 was preached before the "Honorable and Ancient Artillery Company." From that year all the sermons have been delivered before the "Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company." It would, therefore, seem that the title "Honorable" was given by common consent as the Company was composed of the foremost men in the town, and many of the captains had been persons of high positions, and the word "Ancient" was added at the end of the Company's first century of existence. Thus the title, Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, was formed. This name has been confirmed by Acts of the Legislature of Massachusetts and of the Congress of the United States.

The first headquarters of the Company were in a building that stood on the site of the Old State House, at the head of State Street. This building was erected by the generosity of Robert Keayne, their first Captain, who for his public spirit and generous support of the church, the college, the town, the colony and the Company will ever be held in grateful respect. This building was destroyed by fire in 1711, but a new building was at once erected, and stood until 1747, when it was destroyed by fire; but the Company removed to Faneuil Hall in 1746, where they have remained until the present time.

By its charter the following privileges were given the Company: To elect its officers, to assemble in any town within the jurisdiction of the Council, to prohibit town meetings being held on the day of the Company's trainings, and also the parades of all other military companies on the day established for the parades of the Company, to make rules and regulations for themselves, which were to be effective when approved by the Governor and Council, and to hold property.

It has annually elected its officers, except in two instances when prevented by the state of affairs in the colony. The anniversary is observed invariably on the first Monday in June. The present ceremonies are imposing and practically the same as in 1638, and are as follows: Early in the morning the Adjutant, with a drum corps, calls at the homes of the officers and sounds reveille; at nine or ten o'clock the Company is formed on South Market Street, and the command turned over to the Commander. The column proceeds to the State House, where the Governor, his Staff and invited guests are formally received and escorted to the church, where the religious services are held. On arriving at the church the National and State colors are placed by the color guard on either side of the pulpit, the band playing the 'Star Spangled Banner.' The invocation and reading of Scripture are followed by singing; the death-roll of the year is then read, and taps sounded. After singing, a prayer is offered, which is followed by the sermon; an original ode sung and benediction pronounced. The Company taking the guests under escort, proceeds to the Common, where the Governor is received with a salute fired by the Artillery. The Commander-in-Chief having taken the chair of state, a review takes place, and then the drum-head election is held. The Adjutant announces the result to the Adjutant-General, who announces it to the Governor, who, if he approves of the persons elected, receives the resignations of the old officers and commissions the new officers. This ceremony having been completed, the Governor and Staff are escorted to Faneuil Hall, where the annual dinner is served. When, for any reason the Governor cannot commission the officers, the Lieutenant-Governor may perform this duty provided he is Acting-Governor. In 1790 Governor Hancock was ill and confined to his bed, so the old and new officers went to his house and the ceremony was performed at his bedside, though the Lieutenant-Governor was present.

In case of the death or absence of a commissioned officer on the first Monday in June, his esponsion must be returned to the Governor by a past officer of the same rank.

The Fall Field Day in October is always observed with a parade, generally lasting several days. In October, 1901, on account of the death of President McKinley, the Company paraded in Boston and held a memorial service. In July, 1887, a delegation visited London, England, to attend the celebration of the three hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Honourable Artillery Company, and were received most hospitably. The next year a delegation of the Honourable Artillery Company visited Boston to attend the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company. In July, 1896, the Boston Company visited England as the guests of the Honourable Artillery Company, where they had a magnificent reception, not only from the Honourable Artillery Company, but Queen Victoria received and reviewed them at Windsor, and the members of the royal family, and especially H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII., extended to them most distinguished honors. In 1903 this visit was returned and the London Company were received in Boston and escorted to their quarters and the first Monday in October, the Fall Field Day was celebrated by a parade and banquet in the evening, the most distinguished military and civil officials being present.

What the first uniform was is not known, but the Chaplain of 1738, Dr. Benjamin Colman, said in his sermon: "Our scarlet and buff." As Dr. Colman had preached before the Company in 1702, he must have often seen the parade. It would seem that blue and buff was worn before the scarlet. In 1756 it was voted that members should appear in a blue coat and gold-laced hat, and, with few changes, this was the uniform until 1810, when a blue coat with red facings was adopted. In 1820 the provision was adopted that "members of the Company who hold commissions in the militia may appear in the uniform of their respective offices, provided that the commissioned officers of the Company alone shall be permitted to wear in it the insignia of their military offices." This provision has been in force ever since, and accounts for the fact that when on parade members may be seen wearing various uniforms from that of a private to that of a Major-General. In 1862 the first fatigue uniform was adopted. Since then there have been a number of changes in the uniform, but lack of space prevents a description.

HEADQUARTERS, ANCIENT AND HONORABLE ARTILLERY COMPANY

Annually in April the Captain appoints a clergyman to preach a sermon on the June anniversary, and who is the Chaplain for the year. All past Chaplains are invited to attend the anniversary day services and dinner.

The following are a few of the members who were distinguished in their day : Captain Underhill, who served in the Pequot War ; Col. William Rainsburrow, Lieut.-Col. Israel Stoughton, Major Nehemiah Bourne, Capt. John Leverett and Ensign William Hudson, saw service in Ireland under Cromwell. Major Bourne became a Rear Admiral ; Richard Morris was Commander of Castle Island, Boston Harbor ; Richard Waldron, Commander-in-Chief of New Hampshire ; Elisha Hutchinson, Commander-in-Chief of the forces sent to the Province of Maine, 1692 ; John Walley, Colonel of a regiment sent against the French and Indians, 1690, became a Lieutenant-General in the king's service. Of the sixty members in King Philip's War, ten were killed ; William Brattle became a Major-General, 1771 ; John Winslow, Colonel in the Nova Scotia expedition, 1755, commanded a regiment in Cuba, a Major-General in the British service ; William Heath, a Major-General in the Continental army ; Major-Gen. Benjamin Lincoln of the Continental army, afterwards Secretary of War ; John Brooks, Lieutenant-Colonel in the Revolutionary army, and Governor of Massachusetts ; John Winslow, Paymaster in Revolutionary army ; Col. William Hull in the Revolution, and Brigadier-General in the War of 1812, Governor of Michigan Territory ; H. A. S. Dearborn, Brigadier-General, commanding the troops in Boston in the War of 1812 ; and Captain Howe, who commanded the Company while it was in service during the War of 1812, it being one of the few companies now in existence that served in that war, and the only one occupying the same building today that they used as a guard-house at that time ; Caleb Cushing, Brigadier-General ; Col. Isaac Hull Wright in the Mexican War. In the Civil War Major-Generals N. P. Banks, Benjamin F. Butler, George B. McClellan, Josiah Porter, Edward W. Hincks and John M. Corse ; Brigadier-Generals Robert Cowden, Horace C. Lee, E. W. Peirce, Samuel C. Lawrence and many others who rendered efficient service to their country and added to the fame of the Company. The Company was also represented in the Spanish War of 1898, and later with the Volunteers in the Philippines.

THE CHARTER

Orders for the Military Company, made by the Governor and Council and confirmed by the General Court.

Whereas divers Gentlemen and others, out of their care of the publick weal and safety, by the advancement of the military art and exercise of arms, have desired license of the Court to join themselves in one Company, and to have the liberty to exercise themselves, as their occasions will best permit ; and that such liberties and privilege might be granted them, as the Court should think meet, for their better encouragement and furtherance in so useful an employment ; which request of theirs being referred unto us of the Standing Council, we have thought fit, upon serious consideration, and conference with divers of the principal of them, to set down and order herein as followeth :

Imprimis. We do order, that Robert Keayne, Nathaniel Duncan, Robert Sedgwick, William Spencer, Gentlemen, and such others as are already joined with them, and such as they shall from time to time take into their Company, shall be called The Military Company of the Massachusetts.

2dly. They, or the greater number of them, shall have liberty to choose their Captain, Lieutenant and all other officers. Their Captain and Lieutenant to be always such as the Court or Council shall allow of ; and no officer be put upon them, but of their own choice.

3dly. The first Monday in every month is appointed for their meeting and exercise ; and to the end that they may not be hindered from coming together, we do hereby order, that no other training in the particular towns, nor other ordinary town meetings shall be appointed on that day ; and if that day prove unseasonable for the exercise of their arms, then the sixth of the same week is appointed for supply. This not to extend to Salem, or the towns beyond, nor to Hingham, Weymouth, Dedham or Concord.

4thly. They have liberty and power to make orders amongst themselves, for the better managing their military affairs; which orders are to be of force, when they shall be allowed by the Court or Council ; and they may appoint an officer to levy any fines or forfeitures, which they shall impose upon any of their own company, for the breach of any such order, so as the same exceed not twenty shillings for any one offence.

5thly. The said Military Company are to have one thousand acres of land (in some place as may not be prejudicial to any plantation), to be granted by the Court to some of the said Company, for the use of the present Company, and such as shall succeed in the same ; to be improved by them within a time convenient, for providing necessaries for their military exercises, and defraying of other charges, which may arise by occasion thereof.

6thly. The said Company shall have liberty, at the time before appointed, to assemble themselves for their military exercises, in any town within this jurisdiction, at their own pleasure ; provided always, that this order or grant, or anything therein contained, shall not extend to free the said Company, or any of them, their persons or estates, from the civil Government and jurisdiction here established.

JOHN WINTHROP, Governor.

THOMAS DUDLEY, Dep. Governor.

On the 11th day of November (OS), 1620, the ship Mayflower with the pilgrims on board cast her anchor in Provincetown Harbor, 63 days from Delft Haven, Holland, after a very boisterous voyage. Before the ship came to anchor, observing that some who were not of the Leyden company were not disposed to acknowledge that any authority existed governing them, as the place of landing was not within the limits of their patent of Virginia and it was thought good that we (they) should combine together in one body and to submit to such government and governors as we should by common consent agree to make and choose, after solemnly invoking the throne of grace they entered into the following compact to which forty-one persons, including all the males of age, subscribe as a basis of government.

In the name of God Amen.

We whose names are underwritten the loyal subjects of our dread sovereign Lord King James by the grace of God of Great Britain France and Ireland, King defender of the faith, etc., having undertaken for the Glory of God and advancement of the Christian Faith and the honor of our King and Country a voyage to plant the first colony in the northern part of Virginia; do by these presents solemnly and mutually, in the presence of God and one another covenant and combine ourselves together into a civil body politic for our better ordering and preservation and furtherance of the ends aforesaid; and by and by virtue hereof do enact, constitute and frame such just and equal laws, ordinances, acts, constitutions and offices from time to time as shall be thought most meet and convenient for the general good of the colony; unto which we promise all due submission and obedience. In witness whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names at Cape Cod the 11th of November in the year of the reign of our sovereign Lord King James of England France and Ireland the eighteenth and of Ireland the fifty-fourth, Anno Domini, 1620.

- 529 Historical painting, "The First Encounter," Dec. 8, 1620. Presented by Mr. Caleb Chase. Painted by Mr. Frederick A. MacNeal, Boston, 1901.

This painting represents the first fight engaged in by the Pilgrims, who first landed at Provincetown, Cape Cod, Nov. 11 (OS) Nov. 21 (NS), 1620. On December 6 a number of the Pilgrims, amongst them Capt. Miles Standish, William Bradford, John Carver and others, left the ship Mayflower in their shallop on a voyage of discovery. They landed after they had passed Billingsgate Point on the north side of Great Meadow Creek in the Town of Eastham, and they saw some Indians cutting up a grampus, who fled on discovering the Pilgrims. The party encamped for the night and the next day explored the region round about Eastham discovering a burial place of considerable extent. That night they heard "a great and hideous cry," which caused them to arm themselves, but concluded the noise was made by foxes and wolves. But about 5 o'clock in the morning they heard a strange cry, and one of the company being abroad came running in and cried "Indians, Indians," and at once their arrows came flying amongst them. They hastily seized their arms and discharged their pieces. The Indians then retired, except one lusty one who stood his ground until several shots had been fired at him. The Pilgrims then followed the Indians a quarter of a mile and picked up 18 arrows, some of which were headed with brass hartshorn and eagle claws. This skirmish was called by them "The First Encounter." On their return to the Mayflower they found that Mrs. William White had during their absence been delivered of a son, whom they called Peregrin, and who was the first child born of English parents in New England, and that the wife of Mr. William Bradford had fallen overboard and had been drowned.

The Pilgrims left Delft Haven, Holland, July 23, 1620, and Southampton, England, Aug. 5, on board the ship Mayflower. They sighted Cape Cod Nov. 9, 1620, and first landed at Provincetown Nov. 11 (OS), Nov. 21 (NS). Some of the party left the Mayflower in their shallop on an exploring expedition Dec. 6 (OS), landed at Clark's Island, Plymouth harbor, Dec. 8, and then the third and final landing was made at Plymouth, Mass., on Plymouth Rock, Dec. 11th (OS), Dec. 21st (NS). This painting represents Capt. Miles Standish and his beautiful wife Rose. He stands upon the Rock aiding his companions to step from the boat upon the shore. John Carver is in the stern of the boat. Isaac Allerton is in the centre of the boat, grasping a long pole. Behind him are William Bradford and Edward Winslow. Bradford is pulling one of the ropes. Elder Brewster is on the shore, surrounded by John Alden and fellow pilgrims. The Pilgrims were first known as Separatists, and after leaving England settled in Amsterdam, Holland, where they came together and formed the "Puritan Church of Scrooby," which was the name of the church in Scrooby, England, and were then known as Puritans, where their home was for more than 12 years. On July 23, 1620, they decided to emigrate to America, and on Aug. 5 left Southampton, England, and after leaving Delft Haven they were then known as Pilgrims. The first winter passed in Plymouth was a very severe one for them, as more than one-half of the men, women and children died from extreme cold and suffering. A monument is now being erected at Provincetown, Cape Cod, to commemorate the first landing of the Pilgrims at that place.

TREATY WITH KING PHILIP

King Philip was the son of Massasoit, the friendly Indian of the English of Plymouth Colony, and as he did not respect the treaty made by his father at Plymouth with the English, the representatives of Plymouth Colony and Massachusetts Bay Colony, with Gov. Prence, arrived in Taunton April 13, 1671, and sent for King Philip to come in, assuring him of their disposition to treat guaranteeing his safety. He proceeded as far as the mill, having placed sentinels on the hill in his rear. He then sent word to the Governor desiring an interview. Some of the townspeople were anxious to attack Philip at once, but were restrained by the Commissioners. It was determined that Gov. Prence should not go to the quarters of Philip, but went out and persuaded him to come into town. He would come on condition that his men should come with him and that the conference should be at the meeting house. He and his braves came to the church, and they sat on one side and the English on the other. The Indians, with their long black hair hanging down their backs, their small and sunken eyes, their persons covered with belts of wampum and fantastic ornaments, and the English with close, shaven hair and solemn countenances looking hostility and defiance, yet with a share of submissive devotion which showed they were willing to put their trust in the God of Battles. King Philip denied that he had any hostile design against the English, but when questioned for his unusual preparations for war he replied that they were getting ready to attack the Narragansetts; but the Commissioners knew that he was getting ready to attack the English at Taunton and other towns, and he finally acknowledged that they were right. He not only gave up his arms, but signed his submission. When he was again out of the presence of the English he seemed to forget all of his stipulations, and the suspicions of his intentions a few years later grew to a certainty and all believed that from 1670 until 1675, when hostilities actually commenced, he was secretly preparing for war.

- 532 Historical painting, "The Great Swamp Fight at Kingston, R. I.," Dec. 19, 1675. Presented by Capt. Albert A. Folsom. Painted by Mr. Walter S. Savory, Boston, 1901.

This painting represents the Great Swamp Fight between the colonists and the Narragansett Indians.

Nos.

The principal leader was of the New England tribes named Metacom, called "King Philip," Sachem of the Wampanoags, and son of Massasoit, the friend of the Pilgrims at Plymouth. The immediate cause of the outbreak of hostilities was the murder of King Philip's men, one of them, Sassamon, a Christian Indian. The murderers were promptly executed by the colonists in June, 1675. The colonial army, which was commanded by Maj.-Gen. Josiah Winslow, Governor of Plymouth Colony, had 575 men from the different towns in Massachusetts, with six companies under Captains Appleton, Mosely, Davenport, Oliver and Johnson, and with a troop of horsemen under Captains Prentice, Siley, Gallop, Mason and Watts, and five companies of 358 soldiers of Plymouth Colony under Major Bradford and Capt. John Gorham. The Massachusetts forces were mustered Dec. 9, 1761, on the Dedham Plains and that same day began their march to Wickford, R. I. On the 18th the combined colonial army rendezvoused at Pettasquanscot, now Tower Hill, R. I., and the next morning, Sunday, Dec. 19, at 5 o'clock A. M., marched to the swamp, arriving at the fort in the swamp about 1 P. M., where they met about 3500 Indian warriors. The English set fire to the wigwams within the fort and drove the Indians out with stores destroyed. It was a fearful life and death struggle for existence. The Indians had destroyed ten or twelve towns, massacred and killed men, women and children. Four English captains and 70 men were killed, and 150 wounded; while 300 Indians were killed and 350 made prisoners. Many of the officers of the English companies were men of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company.

- 533 Historical painting, "The Battle of Lexington," April 19, 1775. Presented by Col. Sidney M. Hedges, 1901. Painted by Mr. Frederick A. NacNeal of Boston.

The Battle of Lexington in its commencement was little more than a cowardly and brutal attack of some 800 British troops under General Gage upon 50 or 60 peaceable citizens, and they shed the first blood of sundry loyal American citizens, subjects of the King, in the fields of Lexington, April 19, 1775. The spirit of freedom which took up arms was not a sudden development, not an accidental discovery; the people had always had it, for they brought it with them from the old world, where from the days of King John it had been the birthright of the English race, so when the revolution came it was only the assertion of their old principles. They were proud of their position as British subjects, and not until their loyalty had endured long series of shocks did it occur to anyone that a separation was either possible or desirable. Not until the New England people had submitted to gross abuses and high-handed political measures extending through a period of more than 30 years did they assert their rights, knowing them under the charter, and resolved to maintain them. The first direct uprising in America was the attempt on the part of the British Government to raise a revenue from the colonies without their consent and without representation in Parliament, and terminated in the first appeal to arms. There was true bravery shown, but it was the firm principle of patriotic valor, unaided by military skill, that drove the British from Concord and Lexington back to Boston. Previous to the 19th of April the British troops had seized at Charlestown Neck 13,425 musket cartridges with balls and 300 musket balls, the property of private citizens, and had previously insulted Colonel Hancock at his house in Boston and many citizens. Many meetings were held to protest against these proceedings, but of no avail, and on the 19th, Sir William Howe, Earl Percy and General Gage, having planned the trip on the evening of the 18th while meeting in the Province House, and 800 British troops left Boston, marching to Lexington and Concord, for it was part of their plan to seize Hancock and Adams at Lexington. The battle commenced at Lexington Common and then at Concord at the Old North Bridge, where many were killed on both sides. The British then returned through Lexington, and all along the route the minute men took up their positions behind stone walls and in houses and fired on the troops, and drove them into Boston. The British had 73 killed and wounded and 26 missing. The Americans had 49 killed, 39 wounded, 5 missing. The events of the 19th of April produced a profound sensation throughout the country, and it aroused the people to arms and gave a new impulse to the cause of freedom.

BATTLE OF LEXINGTON

- 534 Historical painting, "Washington Crossing the Delaware," Dec. 25, 1775. Presented by Lieutenant James A. Davis, Lieut. J. Stearns Cushing, Lieut. L. A. Blackinton, Lieut. Frank P. Stone, Sergt. Joseph Hubbard, Sergt. John A. Emery, Sergt. John R. Newman, Sergt. John D. Nichols, Mr. R. J. Rodday, Mr. H. H. Newcomb, Mr. G. H. W. Bates, Mr. James M. Hilton, Mr. Charles W. Munro, and Mr. William O. Webber. Painted by Mr. Frederick Russell Bates, Boston, 1901.

The darkest period of the American Revolution was in the latter part of the year 1776, when the British soldiers captured Fort Washington, commanding the Hudson River, with 3,000 American soldiers, 55 cannon and some stores. Many of the soldiers took the oath of allegiance to the King and thousands returned home by expiration of their terms of service, and recruits were then few in numbers. General Washington, with less than 4,000 men, led the retreat through New Jersey. "The wreck of the Continental army were closely pursued by Lord Cornwallis." Washington sought refuge on the western banks of the Delaware River. The British were elated as winter was at hand and the American army disheartened. On Dec. 25, 1776, General Washington recrossed the river, one part below Trenton and the other nine miles above. The floating ice, with a heavy snowstorm at the time, made the passage very dangerous, but the men of Marblehead came forward and manned the boats. It was 3 o'clock the next morning before all the troops and cannon had crossed the river. They then began their nine mile march to Trenton, and their watchword was "To Victory or Death." In the fight the British lost 40 officers and privates killed and about 1,000 soldiers taken as prisoners, with 6 pieces of brass artillery, 12 drums, 1000 stands of arms and 4 stands of colors. Washington's army then recrossed the river and encamped. By this movement and victory at Trenton it inspired brighter hopes and a more resolute determination to "conquer or die."

DESTRUCTION OF TEA IN BOSTON HARBOR, DEC. 16, 1773

- 804 Bronze medal. Obverse: Centennial Celebration, Newburgh, New York, Oct. 18, 1883. Washington's Headquarters. Proclamation of Peace. Disbandment of the Army. Reverse: Washington's family coat of arms, from which the American flag was designed. Presented by Sergt. Edwin E. Snow, Oct. 31, 1908.
- 805 Historical painting, Destruction of Tea, Boston Harbor, Dec. 16th, 1773. Presented through Sergt. Edwin E. Snow for the donors: Lieut. Charles W. Dyer, Lieut. Frank H. Mudge, Mr. Frederick E. Atteaux, Mr. William A. Hardy, Mr. William H. Mitchell and Mr. James W. Vose. Painted by Mr. Darius Cobb, Boston, 1902.

This painting represents the destruction of 342 chests of tea by throwing it overboard from the three ships, the "Dartmouth," "Eleanor" and "Beavor," moored at Griffin's Wharf, now No. 512 Atlantic Avenue, on the night of Dec. 16, 1773, belonging to the East India Company. On that night was enacted one of the most historical events that ever occurred in Boston or the Massachusetts Bay Colony.

By importing this tea into Boston the East India Company, finding itself embarrassed from the excessive accumulation of tea in England, applied to Parliament for assistance and obtained an act empowering the Company to export tea to America without paying the ordinary duty in England. This would allow the company to sell at such low rates that it was thought the colonists would purchase with a tax of three pence per pound, but the men of Boston and surrounding towns protested against it, and rather than have it landed and pay this tax, many public meetings were held which created great excitement. They held meetings under the Liberty Tree and at the Old South Meeting House, where there were assembled more than 2,000 persons, and they decided that the tea should not be landed but sent back to England or have it thrown overboard. So on that memorable night many of the patriots met at the John Hancock Tavern, Corn Court, off of Faneuil Hall Square, the Green Dragon Tavern, and at the Bradlee House, Hollis Street, and disguised themselves as Mohawk Indians and proceeded to Griffin's Wharf, boarded the three ships then moored there and threw the tea overboard.

- 806 Historical painting, Battle of Bunker Hill, June 17, 1775. Presented by Gen. Samuel C. Lawrence, 1901.

The Battle of Bunker Hill was the beginning of the end of English domination on the Western Hemisphere, and was fought at Charlestown on June 17, 1775, between the British troops and the American Colonial Army. The American Army occupied the heights of Bunker Hill the night before the battle, June 16th, and the British troops came over the hill from Boston on the 17th and tried to dislodge them, and after a bloody conflict, lasting one and one-half hours, the powder of the Americans being exhausted, they retreated in good order, and left the hill in the hands of the British.

The Americans lost in killed 140 men, 271 wounded, and 30 were captured, total 441 men. The British lost in killed 226 men and 828 wounded, total 1054 men. This was a great victory for the Americans.

British officers at the battle: Major-General Howe, General Clinton, General Pigot.

American Officers: Gen. Artemus Ward, Col. William Prescott, Gen. Israel Putnam, Gen. John Stark, General Pomeroy, Generals Joseph Warren, Reed, Knowlton.

British warships that took part in the cannonade of Charlestown: Somerset, 68 guns, Cerberus, 36 guns, Glasgow, 36 guns, Lively, 20 guns, Falcon, Symmetry, 20 guns.

Maj.-Gen. Joseph Warren, who was killed on June 17, 1775, was a very prominent leader of the Revolution and took a very prominent part in the battle, fighting as a common soldier in the redoubt, showing great bravery, and was the last to leave. He was buried where he fell. His remains now are buried in the Warren lot in Forest Hills cemetery.

On Aug. 24, 1774, he wrote the following words: "When Liberty is the prize who would stoop to waste a coward thought on life?"

EVACUATION OF BOSTON BY THE BRITISH, MARCH 17, 1776

Nos.

Sergt. Charles S. Ashley, Mr. Freeman A. Hardy and Dr. A. E. A. McCann. Painted by Mr. Darius Cobb, Boston, 1901.

This painting represents the evacuation of Boston by the British, March 17, 1776. During the siege of Boston there was no more important point to be fortified and protected than Dorchester Heights, which commanded the water front, so after some exchange of hostilities between General Washington and General Howe a strong detachment of the Continental Army silently crossed Dorchester Neck on the morning of March 4th and commenced to throw up fortifications at Dorchester Heights. They labored incessantly and accomplished their object. To cover this movement General Washington kept up a heavy fire on Boston, which was returned by the British without doing much harm on either side. The next morning General Howe was astonished to see what the American army had done, and his efforts to dislodge them were defeated. He then called a council of war and decided to evacuate Boston, and on Sunday morning, March 17th, seven thousand British soldiers and hundreds of Tories began to embark amid great confusion, and sailed for Halifax, N. S. As the last of the British troops were marching out of Boston General Washington entered it amid the triumphant gratulations of the people.

After the siege of Boston, Congress on March 25, 1776, ordered and had struck a beautiful gold medal as a gift to General Washington. It bears the mottoes "Hostibus primo Fugistis" and "Bostonium Recuperatum." General John Thomas, General Artemus Ward. This medal is now preserved in the Boston Public Library.

- 808 Historical painting, Constitution and Guerriere, 1812. Presented by Capt. Edward E. Allen, 1903. Painted by Mr. Marshall Johnson, Boston.

This painting represents the fight between the U. S. Frigate Constitution (44 guns), under the command of Capt. Isaac Hull, and the British ship of war Guerriere (38 guns), under command of Commodore Philip Vere Broke, off the coast of Massachusetts, Aug. 19, 1812, lat. 41° 41' N., Lon. 55° 48' W. After a two hours' fight the Guerriere was captured.

Nos.

The battle began at 5 o'clock P. M. and lasted until 7 P. M., when the Guerriere surrendered and was burned, as she was almost a total wreck. She had been one of a squadron of five British war vessels under the command of Commodore Philip Vere Broke, from which squadron the Constitution in July, 1812, had made her memorable escape in a chase which lasted three days in an almost dead calm. This was considered one of the greatest feats of seamanship of the war. After the fight the Constitution returned to Boston. The Frigate Constitution was built in Boston in 1794, and had captured in battle the British ships of war Java, Cyane and Levant. She is now (1908) at the Navy Yard, Charlestown.

- This painting represents the first Thanksgiving in the Plymouth Colony at Plymouth, Dec. 21, 1621, by the Pilgrim Fathers from the Mayflower, and 90 Indians were present. The Pilgrims during the first six months after their landing at Plymouth in 1620 endured more suffering, bodily and mental, than ever was borne in an equal space of time, and through that dreadful winter of 1620 more than one-half of their numbers of men, women and children sank beneath their suffering and died, until their first crops had ripened and had been gathered. They then appointed and held their first Thanksgiving. They gave thanks to Almighty God for His great kindness and goodness in bringing them safely to the shores of the new world and the abundance of their crops, and rejoiced in a delightful record of mutual help and good cheer; also in their deliverance from the savages, the Indians, and from the fear and terror of the wild beasts of the forest.

- 864 An old Canton blue china tureen and platter presented by Mr. Albert W. Brown of Boston, on behalf of Mrs. William Wirt Patrick, 115 West 48th Street, New York City, a great granddaughter of Major James Phillips, Captain of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts in 1802. These articles were part of a dinner set given as a wedding present to her great grandfather, Major James Phillips, on his marriage, Feb. 1, 1801, to her great grandmother Mary Tilden, daughter of Deacon David Tilden of Boston, and are now more than 150 years old. Presented through Sergt. Edwin E. Snow, Jan. 28, 1909.
- 865 A piece of wood from one of the many logs that were sunk and held together by iron chains across the Hudson River to prevent the British fleet from going up the river in 1776. It was given by a descendant of Robert Fulton, who invented the first steamboat, to Captain Moody, a noted Massachusetts sea captain, in 1857, and by his wife to Mr. Thomas Arnold of North Abington, Mass. Presented by Mr. Thomas Arnold, February, 1909.
- 866 A lithograph of President Abraham Lincoln and his cabinet in 1861. Presented by Capt J. Henry Brown, 1909.
- 867 An engraving. La Dernière Revue! Napoléon Mort à Ste. Helene. La Carde Mort a Waterloo. By Horace Vernet. Formerly the property of the New England Guards of Boston, and purchased in Paris, France. Bequest of Mr. John E. Atkins, 1908.
- 868 An old flint lock musket, formerly the property of Mr. John Atkins of Boston. Bequest of his grandson, Mr. John E. Atkins, 1908.
- 869 A brick taken from the Oliver Wendell Holmes House, Cambridge, Mass., in 1885, by Mr. James M. Hilton of Cambridge. This house was built about 1707, and was the original headquarters of the American Army of the Revolution, and where the Battle of Bunker Hill was planned and ordered, and where Benedict Arnold received his first commission of colonel, May 3, 1775. Presented by Sergt. Edwin E. Snow.

- 870 A copper cup made from the copper placed on the roof of the tower of Faneuil Hall in 1761. It was taken off by the E. B. Badger and Sons Company, December, 1889, for the purpose of remodelling the building. The superintendent of reconstruction was Mr. George W. Griffin, formerly a building inspector of the City of Boston. The cup was found among the effects of the estate of Nancy Griffin, deceased, widow of George W. Griffin, by her executor, Mr. William H. Preble. Presented by Mr. William H. Preble, March 24, 1909.
- 871 A piece of Plymouth Rock, 1620, from Mr. Lorenzo D. Dixon of Chelsea, Mass. Presented by Sergt. Edwin E. Snow.
- 872 A piece of wood from the Eliot oak tree, South Natick, Mass., which is more than 575 years old. Under this tree in 1651 John Eliot, the apostle to the Indians, preached and the noted and gifted Indian, Takawomb-plait, was converted. John Eliot translated the English Bible into the Indian language: Up-Biblum-God-1633. Born 1604, died 1690. The noted Indian, Takawomb-plait, born 1652, died 1716. Presented by Mr. M. V. B. Bartlett, South Natick, Mass., 1909.
- 873 A bill-of-fare of the dinner given by the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company at the Island House, Bellows Falls, Vt., on its Fall Field Day Parade, Monday, Oct. 3, 1853. Presented by Mr. Albert H. White of Boston, through Col. J. Payson Bradley, 1909.
- 874 Officers' and Privates' buttons of the Honourable Artillery Company. Presented by Capt. J. Henry Brown.

Nos.

- 875 A bronze medal and a copy of a book issued by the Lodge of St. Andrew to commemorate the 150th Anniversary of the granting of its charter by the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and to record its annals for the past twenty-five years. Presented through Capt. Henry Gregory Jordan.
- 876 Six Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company's buttons, marked 1638. Presented by Sergt. Edwin E. Snow.
- 877 Armstrong shell. Taken from a captured Armstrong gun by Capt. Edwin R. Frost at City Point, Va. Presented by Capt. Edwin R. Frost.
- 878 A brick from Libby Prison, Richmond, Va. Taken from the walls of the building by Mr. J. Hayden Gilham, June 28, 1882, where more than 30,000 Union prisoners, mostly officers, were imprisoned during the Civil War, 1861-1865. Presented by Capt. Edwin R. Frost.
- 879 A brick from the Francis Wyman House, Burlington, Mass., built about 1666. In 1675 it was arranged for a garrison house, and the port holes are still to be seen. This house was an exposed point during the Indian troubles in King Philip's War, and Francis Wyman, on one occasion, called on the citizens of Woburn, Mass., for a garrison to protect it. The house is still standing (1909) and in a good state of preservation. Presented by Sergt. Edwin E. Snow.
- 880 A piece of one of the timbers, and four hand-made wrought iron nails from the British hospital, situated on the corner of Lafayette and Prince Streets, Boston, Mass., during the seige of Boston, in 1775 and 1776. Presented by Mr. F. Ford, Charlestown, Mass.
- 881 Cap ribbons from the Spanish Ships of War, "Alvarado" and "Christobal Colon," worn by the sailors on these ships and given to the sailors on the U. S. S. "Resolute," then as prisoners of war after the Battle of Santiago; were then taken to Portsmouth, N. H., Navy Yard. Also cap ribbons from the U. S. S. "Cincinnati," "Chicago" and "Raleigh," worn by the sailors of these naval ships during the Spanish-American War, 1898. Presented by Mr. George F. Harding.

Presented by Sergt. Edwin E. Snow in behalf of Col. Chas. B. Stone.

- 926 Four silver buttons, made by Mr. Evans of Worcester, Mass., for the coachman of Abraham Lincoln in 1861. Presented by Sergt. Edwin E. Snow in behalf of Mr. Evans, 1912.
- 927 A wooden button from the John Hancock House, built in 1767, razed in 1863, at 29 and 30 Beacon Street, Boston. This button was taken from the cupboard over Governor Hancock's desk, which was used to close it. Presented by Sergt. Edwin E. Snow, 1912.
- 928 A proof engraving of Gen. George Washington (Stewart's) which for many years hung on the walls of the Old South Meeting House, built in 1723. Presented by Mr. John M. Fisk, September, 1911.
- 929 A sepia picture of Gen. Samuel C. Lawrence, Captain of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company in 1869, and Colonel of the 5th Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, 1861. Presented by Mrs. Samuel C. Lawrence, through Col. Everett C. Benton, Jan. 15, 1912.
- 930 A confederate rifle, captured in the barracks at Newburne, N. C., March 15, 1862, when that town was captured by General Burnside, commanding the 9th Army Corps. This rifle was found with a lot of loot in the barracks, and is apparently an old Belgium rifle, cut down for use on horseback. The bore is apparently a 56 calibre. The strange thing about this rifle is that it has no place for a ramrod, as all service rifles at that time were fitted with a ramrod. The steel rod embedded on the left side of the stock was evidently placed there so the rifle could be hooked on a saddle when not in use. It is probable that the ramrod was carried in a similar manner on the saddle. This rifle was found by Alpheus M. Seagrave of the 4th Rhode Island Regiment, Company H. Presented by Mr. Alpheus M. Seagrave, Uxbridge, Mass., April 2, 1912.
- 931 A brick taken from the lower foundation of the Old Province House, Boston, situated nearly opposite the - Old South Meeting House, in the rear of No. 335 Washington Street. It was built in 1667 for Peter Sergeant, as a residence. The Province of Massachusetts Bay bought it in 1715, and it was used for the Governor's House previous to and during the Revolutionary War. Presented by Sergt. Edwin E. Snow, March, 1912.

- 932 An English Flag, 24 feet long, which was brought to Boston by the 62nd Regiment, St. John Fusiliers of St. John, N. B., when that regiment visited Boston, June 17, 1911. This Flag, with the American Flag, was flown on Bunker Hill Monument, on the 17th of June, and the third time that an English Flag has been flown there. Presented by Gen. William Oakes, 1911.
- 933 An old military hat, used in 1812-1815. Was taken from an old house in Scituate, Mass. Presented by Lieut. Geo. H. Allen, 1912.
- 934 A piece of wood taken from the Old Belfry at Lexington, Mass., when it was blown down in June, 1909, by Mr. John Dennett, Superintendent of Bunker Hill Monument Association, who was standing near it. This belfry was built in 1691 and was where Paul Revere rung the alarm April 19, 1775. Presented by Mr. R. Slater, 1911.
- 935 A lithograph colored engraving of the British Army, dedicated by permission of the General Commander-in-Chief, His Royal Highness, the Duke of Cambridge, K. C., K. P., G. B. C. and C., by his obliged and obedient servant, Arthur Akermann.
- 936 A photographic silhouette of John Lucas, Quartermaster in 1786, of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts. Presented by Q.-M. William L. Willey, March, 1912.
- 937 A prize cup, given to the best drilled and rifle-shot score of any Company of Infantry of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company at a Muster and Match, on the grounds of Col. Everett C. Benton, at Belmont, Mass., Sept. 25, 1911. The prize was won by the 5th

Nos.

Company of Infantry, "The Dandy Fifth," under command of Sergt. James W. H. Myrick, and presented to the Company, April, 1912.

- 938 A Federal and Confederate bullet from the battlefield of Lookout Mountain, and also a bullet from the battlefield of Kennesaw Mountain, June 27, 1864. Presented by Mr. William Alden Blossom, Roxbury, Mass., 1911.
- 939 A pair of old-fashioned hand cuffs, found at Fort Barranacas, Fla., Jan. 1, 1909. Used from 1848 to 1865. Presented by Mr. Joseph Wilmer, Fort Barranacas, Fla., of the 20th Company, C. A. C., May 14, 1912.
- 940 A book of the Annual List of the Chiefs, Officers, Court of Assistants, etc., etc., of the Honourable Artillery Company of London, England, 1912. Presented by B. T. Mills, Secretary, Honourable Artillery Company, London, England, 1912.
- 941 A framed notice for applicants for service in the United States Army, during the Revolutionary War, under General Washington. Presented by Mr. Charles I. Wheeler, 1912.
